Plan With a Purpose

In this training we will discuss things to think about when planning an area of study. We will use a web to plan an area of study, pick an objective/standard we want the children to experience, look for a book to support that objective/standard and what activities could be used in the learning environment to support the objective/standard. We will discuss ways to document what the children are doing and how you will know if they know what you are trying to teach them.

Sharing stories, changing lives: Powerful strategies to help children ages 3 to 9 value diversity and confront bullying and bias

We all care about our children's success in school and in life. Teasing, bullying and bias not only hurt children's feelings, but they can keep them from the success we so badly want for them. Caring adults can make a big difference by helping children accept themselves and others and stand up to teasing, bullying and bias. Come talk about how to make a difference in your children's lives by talking with them about differences and bias and teaching them to stand up for themselves and others using interesting activities, books and persona dolls.

Natural and Logical Consequences

This class explores the meaning and function of natural and logical consequences within the child care setting. Traditional, less effective methods of discipline will be discussed and providers will learn how to replace these old methods with more effective techniques. Providers will learn how to stay calm during stressful interactions with children using natural and logical consequences. As a result the providers will see an increase in cooperation and respect with the children in their program.
